A Camper? Me?...Never!

Before becoming a member of Chapter G, that was my thoughts about camping. As time passed hearing stories from several members of the fun they were having, I decided to give it a try. Soon after purchasing an old, leaky, well used camper from Windy (got a pea) Quire, I joined up with a group from the "G". My first trip was to Pigeon Forge for a few days of camping and attending a motorcycle rally.

The trip started out badly and went downhill from there. Enroute we got caught in the middle of a terrible storm with pouring rains and very high winds. Even though it was midday, the sky was as dark as if it was midnight. The only thing I could see was the tail lights from the bike I was following. We were finally able to take refuge in a small restaurant. No electricity, no food, nothing but shelter from the storm.
Later that evening at the campground a second storm with high winds, pouring rains and falling temperatures. My good friend Homer and I spent most of the night hunkered down in the men's restroom. Since our campers were parked under the only tree in the campground, we did not feel trying to sleep there was the smartest thing to do. The next day at the rally we learned that the storm had destroyed most of the vendors tents and displays.

My second camping adventure was not much better than the first. Led by Harry and Asa, a group of us headed west with the Black Hills being our destination. After our first night at a campground in Missouri we woke to a pouring rain. Being inexperienced as Homer and I were at camping, we were shocked to see all the others were packed up with their rainsuits on and ready to ride and we weren't even dressed yet.

After we hurriedly dressed, folded up our campers, into our rainsuits, we started down a long drive with rain still pouring down. Asa came on the CB radio and said, "Ron and Homer, as we approach the highway ahead it is time for you two rookies to make a decision. You can turn left, and I don't blame you if you do. That road will take you back home. If you turn right that road will eventually take you to places you will remember the rest of your lives. So, what will it be boys?"

Me being wet, cold, hungry and really depressed said to Homer, "What do you want to do", hoping he would say let's turn left. Instead he said," Let's go west young man. Turn right, turn right!" So, against my better judgment we turned right. Now many years later, many western camping (always) trips later, thousands of miles later, I'm so glad we turned right. Turning left who knows what the future would have been. Turning right I lived the future. I am so thankful for Homer making that "right" decision.

A camper? Me?...ALWAYS!

CHAPTER DIRECTORS REPORT

As Thanksgiving approaches, it's a good time to slow down for a moment and reflect on the many things we have to be thankful for. While the riding season may be winding down, the memories, friendships, and experiences we've shared throughout the year continue to warm our hearts.

I am incredibly grateful for each member of River Valley Riders. You are what makes this chapter special. Whether you've led a ride, volunteered at an event, welcomed a new member, shared a story, or simply showed up with a smile and a willingness to enjoy the journey, you've helped strengthen the spirit of our chapter.

This year brought us countless miles of scenic roads, laughter around tables, beautiful backroads, and the occasional "creative reroute" when someone was absolutely certain they knew where they were going. Somehow, those unexpected detours often became the rides we talked about the most.

Thanksgiving reminds us that the greatest gifts are often not the things we own, but the people we share our lives with. Our chapter is more than a motorcycle group. It is a family of friends who celebrate together, support one another, and make every mile more meaningful. As riders, we know that life is a lot like a motorcycle trip. Sometimes the road is smooth, sometimes it's under construction, and sometimes your carefully planned route suddenly becomes an adventure because you missed a turn while admiring the scenery. The important thing is not how perfectly you follow the map, but who is riding alongside you when the road takes an unexpected twist.

As you gather with family and friends this Thanksgiving, I encourage you to take a moment to appreciate the blessings in your life and the people who make the journey worthwhile. Be thankful for the friends who ride with you, the memories you've made, and the roads still waiting to be explored. And let's be honest, we're also thankful for heated gear, tailwinds, gas stations that still sell pie, and motorcycles that start on the first push of the button. Some blessings are small, but they're blessings nonetheless.

On behalf of the chapter leadership team, thank you for making River Valley Riders a chapter filled with friendship, laughter, and adventure.

We are grateful for every one of you. Wishing you and your families a happy, healthy, and blessed Thanksgiving. May your turkey be moist, your pie plentiful, and your next ride have fewer wrong turns than your GPS predicts.

ASSISTANT CHAPTER DIRECTOR'S REPORT

A few times a year a stray mouse will wander into my home. That's not a smart move for the rodents, as I can usually dispatch them fairly quickly. This time I discovered the little devil when it got sloppy eating hard candy on my counter. So, I thought to myself, if the mouse likes this candy, I will use it to bait the trap, thus sealing its fate: death by lifesaver! Ironic isn't it, but it didn't work that way. This smart little mouse was able to remove the lifesaver without setting off the trap. So, I had no choice but to pull out the heavy artillery: choosy moms choose JIF. The second night as I was trying to fall asleep, I heard my unwanted house guest chomping on something, so I went to the kitchen to see what the late-night snack was. I pulled out every box and bag looking for bite marks, but I didn't find a single nibble. Then I heard a rustling in the cabinet by the trash can where I placed my peanut butter delight, and I realized my guest was caught by the foot!

Now as much as I detest those little furry critters, I don't have the heart to look them in the eye and take their life. I also could not give up a night of sleep listening to it struggle to get free, so I placed it in a bag, tied it shut, and tossed it outside. Then I went back to bed. But as I lay there unable to sleep with my mind going wild, I thought that thing was going to get free, chew through the bag, and find its way back into the house. So, I got up, found a container with a lid, and went outside to put the mouse in the bag into the container. Confident that in the morning I would take the mouse (in the bag stuffed into the container) with me a release it somewhere along the way to work. Any mouse this tough deserved to live! And then I went back to sleep.

A few hours later, sleeping warm and cozy in my bed, I heard a noise, like something fell on the floor in my room. I pulled the covers tight as I glared into the darkness. I was certain that the furry little beast had chewed off its foot, chewed through the bag AND the container, found its way back into the house, and was now coming for ME! Cowering in my jammies, I contemplated my next move, but by this point I was tired, so I decided to go back to sleep and just accept my fate.

Moral to the story…Life is short! Enjoy it while you can! You never know what lurks in the darkness.

RIDERS EDUCATION REPORT

Believe it or not, there is science behind the speed limits that are posted on various roadways. Several factors are used to determine a safe speed limit for a given stretch of road such as:

- Roadway environment:
- Roadway characteristics
- Geographic Context
- Crash experience
- Speed distribution of free-flowing vehicles
- Speed trends
- the 85th percentile

While I think the first six factors are obvious, the seventh may need some explanation. The 85th Percentile Rule is seen as the 'traditional' method of evaluating and setting speed limits. It is based on human behavior rather than data or statistical analysis. This method of setting speed limits suggests most drivers will naturally select the safest speed to travel under normal conditions for a given roadway.

The Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices for Streets and Highways defines the standards used by road managers nationwide to install and maintain traffic control devices on all streets, highways, pedestrian and bicycle facilities, and site roadways open to public travel. The 11th edition was adopted with an effective date of January 18, 2024. The MUTCD is published by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) under 23 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR), Part 655, Subpart F

Highways usually have posted minimum speed limits to prevent slower-moving vehicles from triggering safety issues such as rear-end collisions, disrupted traffic flow, and traffic backups. Safe speed limits are chosen to balance safety with traffic efficiency. Unfortunately, most speed limits are reviewed reactively because of roadway changes, policy adjustments, zoning updates, or crash statistics, and after a road or other infrastructure project has been completed.

The legal basis for speed limits typically rests on statutes enacted by state legislatures and local ordinances approved by city or county governments. One of the first speed limits ever recorded was set in 1652. The law was issued in New Amsterdam (now New York) that stated that no "wagons, carts or sleighs shall be run, rode or driven at a gallop." The fine for breaking this speed limit was "two pounds flemish", or about $150 today.

There is a strong correlation between higher speeds and accident severity: a 5% increase in average speed typically leads to a 10% increase in injury and 20% increase in deaths.

Vehicle speed (mph)	Probability of pedestrian fatality (%) *	Probability of pedestrian fatality age ≤ 14 (%)	Probability of pedestrian fatality age 15 to 59 (%)	Probability of pedestrian fatality age ≥ 60 (%) **
20	5	1	1	3
30	45	5	7	62
40	85	16	22	92

RIDERS EDUCATION REPORT

The suggested speed limits for curvy sections of roadway are determined using the following formula:

$$R_{min} = \frac{V^2}{15(0.01e_{max} + f_{max})}$$

Source: U.S. Department of Transportation

The variables in the above formula are defined as:
R_{min} = minimum radius of curvature (ft (m)).
V = design speed (mph (km/h)). e_{max} = maximum rate of roadway superelevation (percent).
f_{max} = maximum side friction (demand) factor.
